TORRID SEX IN EAST BERLIN

LR3 7" Single

Release Date: 07.21.09

Crossing the Rubicon - it's better when it isn't safe, when there's a chance of being caught. But, life is free and easy beyond the wall, in the Neon City, so why risk it? Why defy the panoptic eye?

A: Torrid Sex in East Berlin
B: Tickled on Poppers

Don't heed the call of the exotic/erotic drums. Ignore the riffs. Don't stop to wonder how they float above, below, between the beat - simultaneously. Then comes the refrain. Don't mind it - it's the anthem of the Other. There's no context for this, at least not on your side.

No, stay there. Choose style, and a clearly demarcated one at that, over substance. Those fluorescent glasses won't do much good on our side. True freedom of expression can only be experienced by breaking barriers. You thought the wall came down years ago? Perhaps it did, but we put it back up. For you.

Yet, despite all warnings, you will slip through. You'll find a way to the forbidden zone. We built it, so you'd come. Things got too easy without barbed wire and watchtowers. Without checkpoints and tunnels, it all felt too safe. There's no exhilaration without danger. There's Torrid Sex In East Berlin.

- "If you were born too late to catch Captain Beefheart in his prime, this is about as close as you're likely to get." - Chicago Sun-Times
- "Working with the most basic of instrumental formats—guitar, bass, drums and singing—they have created a shocking yet insistently accessible transformation of modern rock 'n' roll verities..." - Howard Wuefing, Your Flesh Mag
